PROFILE OF UNI STUDENTS

A report entitled, "A Comparison of Northeastern's Student Body: Fall, 1972 and Winter, 1976" was recently released by the Office of Institutional Studies. This study was based upon a survey designed to capture student demographic information and was first used during the Fall, 1972 trimester when 6,890 individuals, or 83.6% of the student body was polled. A second survey was distributed to a stratified sample of students during the Winter, 1976 trimester. The student body profile, as reflected by the surveys, tends to validate the statement, "The more things change, the more they remain the same." Although Northeastern's programs have expanded and developed, the focal point of identifying and meeting the educational needs of the community remains the same.

The following excerpts from the report are presented to give you a profile of the student body:

In absolute terms, the total number of students has increased 15%, with the bulk of the increase coming at the undergraduate level. While much of this growth was anticipated, the university did experience overenrollments in the Fall terms of 1974 and 1975.

Student Attendance Patterns by Level

Fall, 1972		Winter, 1976
Undergraduates	Pct.	Undergraduates	Pct.
Full-time	3,737 75.1%	Full-time	4,471 73.3%
Part-time	1,237 24.9%	Part-time	1,629 26.7%
total	4,974 100.0%	6,100	100.0%

Fall, 1972			Winter, 1976
Graduates	Pct.		Graduates	Pct.
Full-time	101	3.1%	Full-time	172	5.1%
Part-time	3,169	96.9%	Part-time	3,220	94.9%
total	3,270	100.0%	3,392	100.0%

Even though the majority of the university's students are Caucasians, minority percentages have been increasing steadily.

On-Campus Students by Ethnic Category

American Indian	Black American	Oriental American	Spanish-Surnamed American	All Others
Fall, 1972
1.7%	5.2%	1.4%	2.4%	89.3%
Fall, 1975
.3%	8.2%	1.7%	7.3%	82.5%

Northeastern has also experienced a marked decrease in the proportion of female undergraduates. In 1972, 64.2% of the student body was female as opposed to 59.5% in 1976. Should this trend continue, a fifty-fifty distribution by sex could be realized in five to eight years.

One of the more important changes in the student body profile is evidenced in the students' choice of degree programs:

Undergraduates	Fall, 1972	Fall, 1976
	Pct.	Pct.
Liberal Arts	26.7%	30.8%
Elementary Education	33.2	20.9
Secondary Education	19.3	8.0
U.W.W.	2.1	2.5
Kaskaskia	.6	.2
Medical Technology	-0-	1.2
Information Science	-0-	2.2
Business and Management	-0-	5.0

Unclassified	.6	.8
Undecided	17.5	24.8
Graduates
Classified	43.1%	39.2%
Unclassified	56.9	60.8

At the undergraduate level, the university's non-traditional and vocationally-related degree programs have become extremely popular, as evidenced by the large numbers of individuals in the B.O.G./BA, Information Science, Business and Management, and Medical Technology programs. As shown in the table, the increased popularity of these programs has come primarily at the expense of declining enrollments in the undergraduate teacher education programs, which have decreased rapidly since 1972. Undergraduate indecisiveness also seems to have increased in recent years and can be seen in the higher proportions of undecided undergraduates enrolled in the Winter of 1976. Given the uncertainty in the labor market and the relative scarcity of available jobs, it is understandable that undergraduates are taking a "wait and see" attitude in following a course of study.

Among the classified graduate students, some shifts in degree program preferences can be detected. Special Education degree programs, as a whole, have maintained relatively stable enrollments, while the Reading and Counselor Education degree programs have experienced substantial increases. Masters programs in the Physical Sciences, Mathematics, Letters, and the Biological Sciences also have maintained stable numbers of enrolled majors, while the several Social Sciences programs have been able to generate moderate increases over the past several years. The only Master-level program that has seen a decline in student demand is the M.A. in Inner City Studies. This development may well be attributed to the plant renovation at the Center for Inner City Studies.

While the above statements may lead one to conclude that Northeastern's student body has been a radically changing entity, in terms of several generally recognized socio-economic characteristics nothing could be further from the truth. Over the past several years, the student body's socio-economic character has exhibited remarkable stability. Even though forty-three percent of the students indicated they were attending Northeastern because of our curriculum or the times we offer classes, it still appears that financial necessity is the prime reason most of our students attend this university. Thirty-five percent responded that they came to Northeastern because of lower tuition costs and the fact that they could not afford to live away from home, which is the same percentage as three years ago.

Of even greater importance, however, is the fact that in both surveys three-quarters of our students found it necessary to work either full or part-time while attending the university.

Comparison of data from both years confirms we are still servicing students from lower-middle income families as defined by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. Almost one-third of the students reported family income in the $10,000 to $14,999 range, with slightly over forty percent reporting incomes of less than $10,000.

The portion of our students receiving some type of financial aid has increased over the last four years:

Distribution of Students Receiving Financial Aid by Level
	Fall, 1972	Winter, 1976
Freshman-Sophomore	47.4%	44.9%
Junior-Senior	49.3	44.9
Graduate Student	11.5	19.0
Unknown	30.4	0.0
All Levels	33.7	39.2

When we examine the parental occupations of our students, their lower-middle income status is further affirmed because fifty-seven percent indicated their parents worked in the following job classifications: technician, sales worker, clerical, skilled, semi-skilled, un-skilled, or service worker, which are usually classified as lower or middle income occupations.

A full three-quarters of the responding students in both surveys told us they were second generation Americans, which means their grandparents probably arrived in the U.S. sometime after the turn of the century. Unlike most residential universities, whose students are largely white Anglo-Saxon Protestants, here at Northeastern almost forty percent of our students indicated they were Roman Catholics, and about sixteen percent practice the Jewish faith.

Also of interest is that in both years, almost sixty percent of our students were first generation college students.

Further stability can also be seen in our students' geographical and national origins. Ninety-five percent of our students were residents of Cook County in both years and, when we look at on-campus students, over seventy-five percent came from the city of Chicago. A full sixty percent of our non-campus students resided in the city north of North Avenue.

As indicated by the above report, Northeastern continues to provide quality education and service. As an urban institution, it recognizes the diversity and rich ethnic backgrounds of its students, and has sought to meet their needs through a variety of traditional and non-traditional programs. The university's continued success will depend upon the state's commitment to adequately support Northeastern's programs.

The Alumni Association's annual meeting will immediately follow the reception. A report on the Association's activities will be given, new Board members will be announced, and the Faculty of the Year Award will be presented during the meeting.

TUITION TO INCREASE:

Many Students to Benefit

On February 17th, the Board of Governors of State Colleges and Universities (BOG) voted to increase tuition, effective September 1, 1977. The tuition increase will actually benefit a large number of students due to a resolution passed by the Board which states that "for the purpose of tuition assessment, students carrying 12 credit hours per academic term shall be considered full-time students and students carrying 11 credit hours or less per academic term shall be considered part-time students."

The BOG has actively studied the question of tuition increase for the past year. After hearing from representatives of the student body and the faculty, the Board based its action on a recommendation of the Executive Officer and the presidents of the five universities governed by the Board.

President Williams supported this recommendation after learning that the Board was assured that funding was being recommended for Illinois State Scholarships next year that would provide financial aid sufficient to meet the impact of the new tuition increase and that the guidelines received from the State regarding the 1978 budget were linked to a tuition increase.

The Board took into account that there had been no tuition increase since 1972, and since that time, the Consumer Price Index has increased by 30%. Thus, inflation reduced the value of tuition currently paid by students from $420 a year to less than $300 per year. Also, during the past 5 years, per capita family income in Illinois increased by 46%.

Undergraduate tuition will be increased by $90 per academic year ($420 to $510) and graduate tuition by $120 per academic year ($420 to $540). At present, part-time graduate and undergraduate students (carrying less than 7 credit hours per academic term) pay $32 per credit hour. The new tuition for part-time resident undergraduate students will be $21.25 per trimester - a reduction of 34%. For part-time resident graduate students, the tuition per credit hour will be $22.50 per trimester - a reduction of 30%.

Enrollment projections for the 1977-78 academic year forecast that approximately 45% of the student body will benefit favorably from the redefinition of part-time students and reduced credit hour costs, and an additional 43% will be minimally affected when increased funding is available to the Illinois State Scholarship Commission.

2-WEEK WORKSHOP OFFERED

The Department of Secondary Education, with the support of the Women's Studies Program, is offering a 2-week workshop on:

INCORPORATING WOMEN'S EXPERIENCE INTO THE SECONDARY SCHOOL CURRICULUM

JUNE 21 - JULY 1, 1977, 9:00 AM - 4:30 PM

This 3 credit hour course will enable secondary teachers in all academic areas to devise strategies for incorporating women's experience into their teaching.

The program will include: presentations/discussions led by feminists working professionally in the fields of psychology, sociology, history, anthropology, education, communication, and the arts; workshops devoted to the development of materials for the classroom use led by feminist teachers with experience in women's studies at the secondary level; talk sessions designed to help participants explore their own feelings and assess their responsibilities as women and teachers.

Enrollment is limited. To reserve your place, please contact Dr. Jane Hawley, Department of Secondary Education, 583-4050 extension 8263.

HELLENIC LETTERS DAY

A Hellenic Letters Day was celebrated on February 3 in recognition of the newly established Greek Studies program at Northeastern. Guests of honor were John Daros, President of the Hellenic Business Men's Association and James Karembias, owner of the Palladium Restaurant, who were instrumental in obtaining financial support for the program.

Courses in Greek studies were introduced at Northeastern in September, 1976. Some months before, it had come to the attention of certain faculty members that the neighboring Greek community had difficulty in preserving its native language, culture, and ethnic pride among its American-born members. Northeastern was in a position, both geographically and by its tradition of community service, to aid the community.

Informal talks between faculty members and nearby Greek businessmen grew into a joint effort of Northeastern and their neighbors. The Greek community offered to match what funds were available at the university for studies in the Greek language and culture. A Greek studies advisory committee was formed as a result of their efforts.

To date, Modern Greek I, II, III, Intermediate Modern Greek, and Greek Culture courses have been offered at Northeastern. While expressing the hope that a full-fledged Greek Studies program will develop from this effort, Dr. Battista Galassi, chairman of the Foreign Language Department said that he believes this program to be of service to the Greek students, the university and the Greek community.

UNI FOUNDATION NEWS

A gift of $4,000.00 was recently presented to Northeastern by Mr. Irwin Goodman on behalf of the National Bank of Albany Park, where he was president for nearly 15 years. Mr. Goodman recently resigned his position there to become Chairman of the Board of Lawndale Trust and Savings. Mr. Goodman is the past president of the UNI Foundation.

Mr. Gerald Maguire, newly elected president of the UNI Foundation, has presented a check for $3,000.00 to Northeastern on behalf of Bankers Life and Casualty Company, where he is the Director of Corporate Services.

ALUMNI MAILBAG

Q. With the job situation pretty tight for new teachers, what is the most popular major for students at Northeastern.

J. H., Chicago

A. We were informed by the Records Office that the Business and Management program, which began in the Fall, 1976 trimester, has the largest percentage of enrollees.

We contacted Mr. Eugene Miller, acting chairperson of the Business and Management Department, and asked why he thought this is such a popular program. The following is Mr. Miller's response:

"The reason for so many students majoring in Business and Management at Northeastern is part of a growing trend throughout the country, in which undergraduates are becoming more interested in business careers. Long-range projections by American corporations show that in future years, the number of opportunities available in the business world will increase at a faster rate than those in many other fields. Today's students are more aware of the financial and psychic rewards in a business career, and find them very appealing.

"The growing enrollments include typical undergraduates who are opting for business and management courses as well as older students who now want the skills to start a new or second career. There are also many students who are already working in the business world and want courses in business to improve or advance their positions in their present jobs."

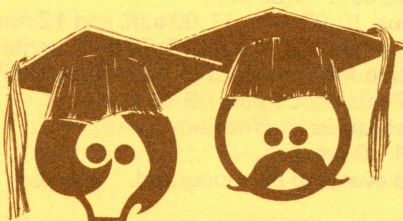

Q. I attended Northeastern in the early 60's when it was called Chicago Teachers College - North. At that time, it seemed that women outnumbered men by at least 4 to 1. Over the years, how many women (and men) have graduated?

A.C., Chicago

A. As of November, 1976, approximately 14,880 persons have received one or more degrees, which can be broken down into the following:

10,113

4,763

ANNUAL FUND

Northeastern's fifth annual giving program is off to its best start ever. Early tabulations of the Annual Alumni Fund reveal that many supporters have increased the size of their gift, and also that a significant number of alumni are making their first gift to Northeastern this year.

As a result of their contributions, alumni are providing scholarships to deserving students and research grants to faculty members. The Fund also allows the university to meet those short-term critical needs, for which no one can plan. As state monies become more and more restricted, Northeastern will increasingly depend on alumni support.

This year, strong emphasis is placed on increasing the percentage of alumni who participate in the Annual Fund. All contributions, regardless of size, are significant. Annual contributions are acknowledged with an active Alumni Association membership card. The names of all contributors will be published in the Fall edition of NEWS.

The 1976-77 Annual Fund will close on June 30. Gifts may be sent to the Development Office at Northeastern, with checks made payable to the "UNI Foundation." As provided by law, all donations are tax deductible. Your participation in the Annual Fund is important to Northeastern's commitment to the pursuit of educational excellence.

INAUGURATION WEEK

May 7 - 11, 1977

Alumni and the community are cordially invited to help celebrate the inauguration of Northeastern Illinois University's third president, Ronald Williams. In his honor, a week of varied activities are planned. All events are open to the general public free of charge unless otherwise indicated.

ACADEMIC FAIR, Saturday, May 7, 9:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

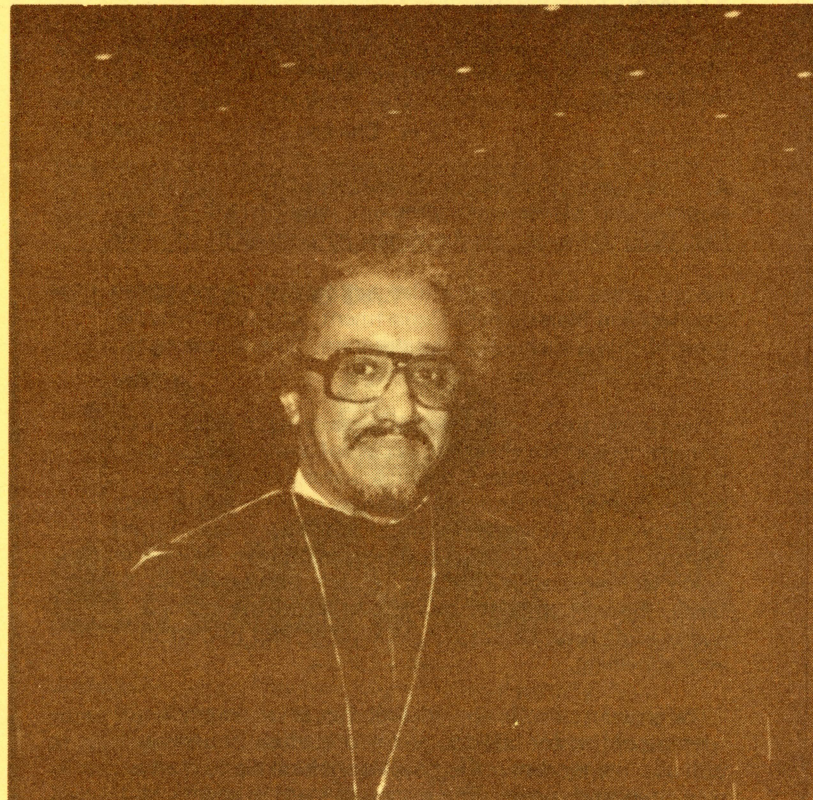

Visitors to Northeastern will have an opportunity to see the "campus in action." The university's diverse programs, departments, and clubs will stage various activities aimed at entertaining as well as informing the public. Alumni Hall, in the Commuter Center, will be the scene of displays, booths, and exhibits depicting many aspects of campus life; elsewhere on campus, an all-day festival of women's films, student film projects, open dance rehearsals, strolling musicians, and other events will be in progress. Morning tours of the campus are scheduled, and plans are being made to visit the university's three field centers; to sign up, please call Jose Acevedo at El Centro, 384-1766, between 1:00 p.m. - 9:00 p.m. A particular highlight of the day will be a reception in honor of President Williams, hosted by the Alumni Association, between 1:00 p.m. - 3:00 p.m. in room 217 of the Commuter Center.

ACADEMIC DIALOGUE, Monday, May 9 - Thursday, May 11

Noted outside speakers will join with Northeastern Illinois University faculty, students, and staff in a series of symposia and workshops to be held throughout the week. The general theme of these sessions will be the mission and goals of the urban university. Individual discussions will focus on such topics as the political aspects of creating the urban university, cooperation among urban schools, how to achieve both excellence and service to the community, the problem of grade inflation, career-oriented programs for urban students, and school desegregation.

KELLOGG FACULTY FELLOWSHIP CONFERENCE, Monday, May 9 - Tuesday, May 10

The theme of this two-day segment of the week will be "Toward the Urban University." Nationally known educators will be featured as well as invited papers on various aspects of urban higher education. The conference is sponsored by a faculty development grant to Northeastern Illinois University from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

Ronald Williams, President

ACADEMIC FESTIVAL, Tuesday, May 10 - Wednesday, May 11

Northeastern talent will be featured in music, dance, and theater productions in honor of the president's inauguration.

Dr. Farr recently moved to Springfield, Missouri, where he plans to lecture and teach part-time at Drury College, his alma mater.

LAND USE PLANNERS

Northeastern's Master of Urban Land Use Planning program has begun its second year. Although originally planned to accommodate 10 students each year, 20 persons were enrolled during 1976.

Designed to train persons to be effective land use planners, one of the program's major objectives is to place its students in permanent, full-time positions before they receive their degree. As part of the program, each student must serve a supervised internship at a local government agency actively involved in urban land use planning. More than 16 local governments, including Chicago's Department of City Planning and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission, have participated in the program.

For more information, call Dr. Harry Kiang, 583-4050, extension 786.
