Chicago, Illinois--Dr. Jerome M. Sachs, president of Northeastern Illinois State College, Bryn Mawr and St. Louis, was recently elected vice chairman of the Board of the Union for Experimenting Colleges and Universities (UECU).

The members of the Union are committed to continual experimentation with new educational ideas as a way of improving their educational programs. All have received some degree of recognition for their pioneering efforts in higher education.

The UECU Board also announced additional colleges and universities were selected for membership in the Union bringing the total to 18. Acceptance of these new members to the Union is a first step in the projected development of several area Centers for Research and Experimentation. The proposed plan would create three or four centers at member institutions. At each center, an Area Coordinator would bring together representatives from both Union and non-Union institutions to work on problems and issues with special relevance to these institutions.

Recent and current programs of the Union include: Project Changeover, a three-year series of summer workshops during which 100 college professors from across the nation developed plans for innovative courses, curriculum design, independent study, and other experiments in teaching and a Graduate School of the Union, which would be especially adapted for those who for various reasons are not able to make use of the usual Ph.D. programs in American Colleges and Universities.

The Union is supported by assessments on its member institutions and by outside grants. Its Governing Board is made up of the presidents of the participating institutions.
