Message from the Desk of Salme H. Steinberg

In this time of deep sorrow, it is helpful for all of us at Northeastern Illinois University to turn to many sources for solace, for strength, and for peace. It is also a powerful symbol to take these steps in community, and not just alone. Meditation about who we are and who we might become in these terrible times is also necessary.

The words and practices of faith are central to many of us. So, too, are music, art, and literature, especially poetry. At the campus reflection meeting this past Monday, I read excerpts from two poems by W. H. Auden who lived through a terrible war and who captured both bitterness and hope in some of his important work that touches many of us deeply. In the poem, "September 1, 1939," he wrote:

*And no one exists alone:
Hunger allows no choice
To the citizen or the police;
We must love one another or die.*

*Defenseless under the night
Our world in stupor lies:
Yet, dotted everywhere,
Ironic points of light,
Flash out wherever the Just

May we all in Auden's words "show an affirming flame" for unity and peace.

Northeastern's El Centro Campus celebrates its 25th anniversary on October 15. Events will include guest speakers, music, ethnic foods, and a student night. The celebration is part of the Hispanic Heritage Month festivities at Northeastern and throughout Chicago.

El Centro is NEIU's educational facility meeting the educational needs of the Latino community. It is located at 3119 North Pulaski. "The need for quality education for Latinos is what gave rise to the idea of an institution like El Centro," said Dr. Caleb Rosado, the newly appointed director of El Centro. "In the mid-1970s the political climate in the city of Chicago among Latinos was demanding a greater response from academic institutions to meet the educational needs of a growing population group."

At El Centro, over 800 students participate in the General Education Program, many of them non-traditional, part-time, and returning adult students, as well as traditional first year and transfer students. Students then move to the main campus to complete their degrees. El Centro also serves as the site where educators who want to become principals can take graduate courses in School Leadership offered by the College of Education.

"El Centro is a place in Chicago where Latinos and Latinas can come for quality and affordable higher education," said Rosado. "Latinos are now the largest minority group in the nation. Latinos comprise over 20 percent of the population in Chicago."

NEIU, Chicago Historical Society Awarded NEH Grant

Northeastern, in partnership with the Chicago Historical Society, was recently awarded a National Endowment for the Humanities grant to conduct a summer seminar for college and university teachers in 2002 titled, "Sport, Society, and Modern American Culture." The six-week seminar will be held June 3 through July 12, 2002 at both Northeastern and the Chicago Historical Society.

The seminar will explore recent approaches in the field, focusing on the urban setting of modern athletic practices among other forms of cultural expression. At the core of the seminar are issues concerning the representation of the body in athletic performance.

Throughout the seminar, participants will share readings of key texts, asking how scholars have linked the athletic arena to broader fields of discussion. Members of the seminar will work on their own research projects, drawing on such resources as the Chicago Historical Society's extensive collections.

NEIU Professors Steven Riess and Patrick Miller

The seminar directors are Steven A. Riess, NEIU professor of History, and Patrick B. Miller, NEIU associate professor of History. Riess and Miller are social and cultural historians who have examined relationships among sport, society and culture from diverse perspectives.

Riess has been teaching and writing about sport for over 30 years, offering a range of undergraduate and graduate courses on the subject as well as courses in urban, ethnic and labor history. As author, teacher, editor and consultant, Riess has played a pioneering role in the emergence of sport history as an academic field. He is one of the founding members of the North American Society for Sport History and served as editor of the Journal of Sport History. He is currently completing a book titled The Sport of Kings and the Kings of Sport: A Political History of Turf, 1865-1930, a study of thoroughbred racing, gambling, and politics in New York and Chicago.

Miller specializes in cultural history as well as African American studies and race relations. His scholarship engages the study of sport and American culture with regard to gender ideology and racial representation, among other points of reference. Miller is the author of several works, including The Playing Fields of American Culture: Athletics and Higher Education, 1850-1945 and co-author of The Uneven Playing Field: A Documentary History of the African American Experience in Sport. ■

Curtis R. Simonson Appointed Director of Business Services Bureau, College of Business and Management

The College of Business and Management recently appointed Curtis R. Simonson as director of the Business Services Bureau. The Business Services Bureau will provide technical assistance to Chicago-area businesses concerned about issues of management, marketing, accounting, and finance. Through seminars, workshops, and direct consulting services, the Bureau will provide assistance in areas which include starting and growing a business, improving productivity, human resource management, quality assurance, supervisory skill development, and information technology.

The Business Services Bureau will help entrepreneurs identify the special needs of developing businesses and will establish internship opportunities for business students. Simonson will concentrate on four main activities: representing the College of Business and Management in the business world; identifying and contracting training and consulting services for area businesses and organizations; developing and coordinating internship opportunities for business students; and implementing a series of workshops and seminars that would be of interest to area businesses.

Simonson will continue to work with existing contacts established by the College of Business and Management as well as to seek new business relationships. He will deal primarily with small to medium-sized businesses. One of his initial projects will be to assess the education and training needs of area companies and to match those needs with the expertise of faculty and outside contractors.

Simonson describes another aspect of his mission as director of the Business Services Bureau as "establishing linkages between the university and the various ethnic communities that exist in the university's service area."

"I am very pleased to be at Northeastern Illinois University," Simonson said. "I am looking forward to working with Dean Shub and the faculty of the College of Business and Management in developing what I think will be a very exciting enterprise."

"We are delighted to have Curtis Simonson joining our team," said Allen N. Shub, acting dean of the College of Business and Management. "With his background in community development and business services, he will help strengthen the links between the College of Business and Management and the community."

Simonson has 18 years of experience in educational administration. He has held positions as director of Community and Business Services at Morton College and as assistant director of the Industry Education Council at Triton College.

His affiliations include the National Council of Instructional Administrators and Illinois Community College Economic Development/Workforce Preparation Association. He has been awarded the Berwyn Development Corporation Exceptional Service Award and the Berwyn Development Corporation Outstanding Service Award.

Employee of the Month

July

Arlene Benzinger was selected as NEIU Employee of the Month for July. Arlene has been administrative aide for Sociology and Criminal Justice since October 1995. As she notes, she is the only administrative aide or secretary in the department. "I'm the first person that the majors and other visitors to our department meet, and I direct them and solve problems," she said.

A faculty member who nominated her says she "runs the department office conscientiously and efficiently and does an excellent job relating to both faculty and students."

Arlene started at NEIU in the offices of the College of Business and Management. Prior to that she worked as a typesetter in the graphic arts field. She is active as a trustee on the AFSCME Local 1989 board. She has also been a student in the Board of Governors liberal arts degree program since fall 1994, has a 4.0 average, and recently received an academic achievement award.

One nominator describes Arlene as "bright, cheerful and contagiously optimistic," and another adds, "She is a very friendly and thoughtful person and worker who contributes much to the positive morale of our department."
