7000 Yr. Old Corpse Revives on Campus

by Dan Mendelson

"I was just backing my caterpillar tractor into position, ya'know to dig a deeper hole, I eased the plow down with my controls and put my baby in forward. Hell, I didn't think I was going to strike anything," explained James Muller, chief construction engineer for Alben-Dennett Construction Co., "but, when I saw my steel blade hit that metal box, I just jumped out of my seat."

That metal box which scared James Muller almost %$†&-less, has had a large portion of the UNI community frightened and wondered also. The box, shaped so much like a coffin was unearthed moments after Muller found it.

The box, 6 feet long by 2 feet wide weighing about 300 lbs. was found to contain a living, breathing man. Wearing only animal skins and with white hair down to his shoulders — he climbed out of the opened coffin and immediately began jogging around the dirt floor of the commuter center — to be. This validates the theories of many social scientists that streaking is a very old sport.

After running once around the commuter center, he sat down on the metal box, panting and breathing hard, and remarked, in an Italian accent "ya'know my Mama never thought streaking was good for anyone — except those hippie bums in college."

By now, everyone in the school had heard of this amazing man who stepped out alive from a coffin, and almost the entire student body was gathered around the commuter ditch to see him. In fact, there were so many people interested in this strange and wonderful man that in the auditorium, Tully and Vrdolyak drew only a crowd of ten people where they were speaking on their positions as candidates for The President of the United States.

It was ascertained that Higlo para-pueblo Anthony mia culpa fara la Diaz — which was the man's name who was buried in this exact spot in the year 5,000 bc. He explained that he was a member of the Indian tribe that lived on the Koster farm in Southern Illinois, (see Print, 3/22/74, page 6.) but that he was banished for the profane streaking he performed constantly. He also spit his chewing tobacco in public, another offense among Indians.

He stated that his name, Higlo para-pueblo mia culpa fara la Diaz, meant: He who sleeps a long time gets up after being hit by a caterpillar tractor, streaks and otherwise freaks everyone out because he's such an old man.

"My mother," who gave me my name, Higlo remarked, "was a remarkable woman, who had an uncanny ability for foretelling the future." He added, "She even told my father what day he'd decide to divorce her, but," he continued, "I think she fixed that one because she kept beating him every night till he left."

Higlo then agreed to leave the commuter center hole and go to the auditorium to answer further questions. . . continued on Page 63.

Coed Dorms come to UNI

by Gerri Leffner

In a private interview with Robert Crestwok, Buildings and Locale Manager, it was learned that half of the proposed Commuter Center will include coed dorms for UNI students. This will be an asset many students will be able to take advantage of and enjoy.

Rooms will be approximately 9' x 8' and carpeted. Each room will be furnished with a window, a sink, a bed, and a dresser.

Two hundred dollars will be charged per trimester for each dorm. Applications will be available at CCAB starting in September, 1974. A physical must be taken preceding approval of each application (no discrimination).

These are some of the proposed restrictions for the dorms:

1. No streaking in the halls.
2. Lights must be shut off by 10:00 pm.
3. Showers and baths will be taken in shifts.
4. Alcohol will be prohibited in rooms before 10 pm.
5. Smoking will be prohibited in rooms before 10 pm.
6. Windows will be opened at least once a week for ventilation.
7. Each resident must shower or bathe at least once a week.
8. Visitors will not be allowed to stay in dorms after 10 pm.
9. All food will be allowed in dorms unless it is found molding in beds.

10. Telephone calls will be limited to three minutes a call. Rates will be cut in half after 8:00 pm. (Obscene calls are prohibited.)

11. Offenders will be chained and gagged one day for each offense.

Further restrictions will be added shortly. A committee of 25 are drawing up the final draft. This committee consists of 5 administration officials, 5 faculty members, and 15 students in good standing.

The Administration should be commended for such a worthwhile idea. (It's about time!) For further information call CCAB at ext. 069.

In a genuine April Fool's joke, sponsored by the UNI Buildings and Grounds Dept., a Northeasterner was trapped in one of the classroom building's elevators for over an hour. Pictured above, one of Chicago's finest and an unidentified student try to pry open the doors of rigged elevator. Even though the trapped man was more down than up after his ordeal the man said he was glad he didn't wind up spending the night in the machine.

Ministration Mashed

Nothing as leftover as cold mashed potatoes. Somehow the cook's miscalculated. Wanting to please everybody a lot and fill them up for good, the cook made too much of it next to nothing. Round up all those cold mashed potatoes into a bowl, pour some milk, a piece of butter, some flour, a few eggs and beat the whole mess into a froth. Make sure everything's mixed in till it looks nice and light. Then pour it into a dish, put some butter and maybe a little cheese on top, and bake it till the whole thing turns brown. Nobody'll every know he's getting the same thing he was so full of before.

UNI Bedtime Story Wakes Up

By Sherry Steiner Hansen

Once upon a time there lived a student named Noah Ark. Mr. Ark was a good and righteous man, who never gave the "administration" any flack at all. The man who operated the Pearly Gates, known to all his friends as Winnywoman for short, looked down upon the campus and did not like what he saw, except for Mr. Ark. Winnywoman immediately called the chief's secretary to make an appointment, but the chief was vacationing in the BIG BEEHIVE in the sky. When the chief returned, Winnywoman took him for a drive in his new white cloud and told him of all the unorthodox things happening down on campus.

"Why chief, do you realize those heathens are displaying their bodies in the nude? And running around. . . I think it's called Streaking!"

"Well, ah, ah. . ." The Chief was speechless.

"And those nasties working at the Print Office are trying to expose us! They even scoffed at that censorship memo sent around", Winnywoman said indignantly.

"The nerve of them — and I was only trying to protect them!" The Chief was really upset.

"What's worse", Winnywoman coyly added, "is that they are totally ungrateful to us for building a shrine to give them some recreational outlets."

"Why those little. . ."

"Wait, don't get too hot yet, there's more. They don't even want an atheletic field on that garden site near the Boy's School!"

"What?", the Chief said, "there must be some con

"What?", the Chief said, "there must be some confusion. Parking facilities and tennis courts are going up there."

"Well, I'll have to contact Fats about that, he'll know for sure."

"He will?" asked the Chief? "You bet your bippie he will."

Winnywoman finished the long list of atrocities the people have committed over a lungh at the Angel Buffeteria. After choking several times on the stale cake he was having for desert, the Chief announced he would have to destroy all the ingrates.

This Mr. Ark did but not without protest.

But, there was one man, this Mr. Ark, who would be saved. He told Mr. Ark of his plan and dictated a list of things to his secretary for Mr. Ark to do. They included erecting a building made of all the paper memos the Chief had decreed, so that Mr. Ark could start a new life the right way; and breaking into all the vending machines to get food to store in the paper building. Then Mr. Ark had to gather one person out of each brank of the faculty (male and female) and also store them in the building.

UNI — In a surprise move today, Print Editor Pat O'Brien announced that the Print would become a 64 page daily newspaper.

"There was no other choice," stated O'Brien, "the tremendous amount of news happening at UNI calls for a large daily paper." O'Brien then went on to state various stories that could not be printed because of the shortage of space in a weekly newspaper.

The best example of this was the fact that Richard Nixon streaked by UNI on his recent visit to Chicago. Few people knew about this event because it was not published for lack of space. Instead a story on the Student Senate was inserted because they had top priority over all other stories that week.

The biggest sports story of the year also was not printed for the same reason. This story dealt with the fact that the UNI Golden Eagles beat the UCLA Bruins in a preseason game 90-88. "They were the toughest team we ever had to face," UCLA superstar Bill Walton revealed after the game.

The one story the Print got the most complaints about was when the Streakers first hit UNI. Students and faculty came up to the Print Office complaining that there were not enough photos of the Streakers in the Print. "Once again this is an example of the fact that there just isn't enough space in a weekly newspaper to print all the important things going on at UNI," said O'Brien.

When the two major newspaper companies in the city learned that the Print would become a major daily newspaper in Chicago, they seemed both surprised and worried. In a private interview, the editor of one of the newspapers, (who wishes to remain anonymous), commented, "I don't know how we'll be able to compete with the Print. First off, it's a free paper, which makes it tough to compete with. Secondly, they have such good writers and reporters, and that speaks for itself. We're seriously considering lowering our rates to 5c per paper in order to compete."

Things look promising for the "Daily Print," as it will soon be renamed. As of this writing, Editor O'Brien was signing a contract with Mike Royko to become a regular columnist.

Two Building Redubbed

In a surprise announcement last March 28, President Mullen announced, that as of April 1st there will be several name changes around this school.

In honor of UNI's Student Senate two of the buildings will be renamed.

The Science Building will be rededicated Lasser Hall in recognition of all the fine work Student Senate President Tom Lasser has been doing recently. The second major change is that the Classroom Building will be renamed The Berg Building after Student Senate

Vice President Mary Berg. One important fact to be remembered is that the Classroom Building's name will be changed to The Cheung Building, as soon as the new Vice President of the Student Senate has had more time in as a Senator. This, however may take years.

The Commuter Center (above the North Dining Hall) will be renamed The O'Brien Center For Intellectual Pursuits. However, Mullen stated that this name change will take awhile — before it gets down pat.

The Chief quickly dispersed with any gripes by comforting Mr. Ark with the fact that the master plan was "somewhere in his office".

So, the Chief made it rain for 40 days and 40 nights until all the students had floated away. Mr. Ark and his crew were safely stashed away in the paper building which was made water repellent by covering it with left-over tarp from the commuter center.

Finally, the rain stopped, the sun shone, and the waters receded.

But, when the Chief told Mr. Ark to come out and rebuild the campus, he found no one. Only a note was left behind. As the Chief read the note, tears fell from his eyes ruining his desk pad.

"This can't be! Winnywoman, tell me it isn't true! They've all left, they've gone to Northwestern University and left me here alone."

Winnywoman could do nothing to comfort his Chief. And, the last time Winnywoman saw his chief, he was still crying, writing memos in the sky.

THE END

Where do the students' interest lie?

With Gary Sosnowski

Well, for the sincere student, it lies with me. I give them a couch to sit on, a soap opera to watch, a kleenex for comfort, and a reason to miss class.

"A" Wing Lounge

Don't look at me, I'm full of books.

Library

The students need me. Look what I offer them: leisurely snack booths designed to keep the students from accomplishing anything but eating; fresh coffee brewed through copper tubing once used in a 1932 Maytag washer, sandwiches at least three, count them one, two, three days old kept wet, cold and wilted by our machines, and if that isn't enough we give you music. You can delight to such tunes as Running Bear, thrill to My Ding-a-Ling, or weep to Our Last Kiss. Yes, I handle all the students needs. The students need me.

The UNI-corn

With me of course, why do you think they call me megaform, I can take on any shape to fit the students, how should I say, needs.

Megaforms

Seriously speaking, I offer the students a variety of intellectual facilities, where they may go forth and seek out themselves.

The Washroom

Well it seems to me that it lies in their stomachs. That's why the cafe is the place. Where else can a students get two pieces of toast for three dollars. Our motto here is: "It isn't the quality of the food, but the price that counts."

Cafe A'la Rip-off

Modestly, I think the students are interested in me. After all, I have private booths, with desks, chairs, and windows. In other words a nice place to catch a nap.

The Carrels

Sure as hell ain't me. I haven't seen a student in years.

Classroom

They are with me because others make claims. I make the students a promise. If you got the time, I got the room.

Authors Comment

If you're reading this hoping to find some explanation of this article, you're not going to find it. I am not going to give any reason, but I know you're going to read every word written hoping to find the reason thinking that maybe I'm lying and I'm really going to tell the reason. But abandon all hope, no reason shall be given. . .Are you still reading this? Of course you are. Now don't you feel foolish?*

Interview with Marcel Marceau

Q. How did you get started being a mimick?

Q. What happens to you when you eat prunes?

The PRINT staff was surprised and pleased when that master of the mime, that magnificent mimick, the moron of the morose, Marcel Marceau visited them in the new ultra-modern PRINT offices.

Monsieur Marceau very happily consented to give us an exclusive interview with him. The interview itself took many hours and this weeks portion is just the first of 42 parts to be run by the PRINT. The master mimick answered a vareity of questions ranging from streaking to Prunes and from the PRINT to President Nixon. We received a great deal of insight in Marceaus' character that was very interesting. All in all it was a great experience for us and we would like to share it with everyone, so here is part one of the exclusive interview with Marcel Marceau.

Q. How do you view streaking?

Q. What is your opinion of Pat O'Brien as Print Editor?

Q. Is it true that you predicted that President Nixon would become the greatest President that the world has ever known?

NEXT WEEK: Marcel shows the PRINT staff how to make funny animals with their fingers and whipped cream.

SPORTS

Kasper's Out; 5 players Ineligible

Dom Kmiecik, Andy Piraro, Chuck Haymes, Joe Leone, Al Lamiramd all became ineligible on March 15th. The five were declared ineligible by a Baseball Eligibility Committee who discovered that each accepted $100 prize money for winning the Northern Continental League Tournament.

In an interview with coach Kaspar, he admitted that he knew they accepted the money but they promised to cut him in if he kept it quiet. The five however, renigged on their promise and never paid him. It was then that Kasper went to the committee to fill them in on his players wrongdoings. The committee decided to make the players ineligible and to relieve coach Kaspar from his coaching duties.

Since these judgments a new coach has been assigned from Western Arizona. Coach Dick Fitzwell (pictured below) has taken over with a plea for some new players. "Anyone interested in playing college baseball may sign up for it in the gym April 1st at 3:00."

"With my experience, who else COULD they pick for manager?"

Team members' reactions on learning of Kasper's release as baseball coach.

Volleyball's "Mystery Man"

by Roseann Podraza

Yesterday, I received a message from Ms. Guzik, the volleyball coach, stating she had an important announcement to go in the newspaper.

The story goes as follows: Tuesday, Mar. 25th. Ms. Guzik under the guidance of Tony Stepovy decided it was time to have a male volleyball player.

The volleyball coach explained out of six guys that tried out she found "her man."

I asked her if there would be any problems with a male player? Ms. Guzik replied, "Well I suppose the girls might not like to share the hairdryers - we're limited, you know."

The volleyball coach, however has an optimistic view. "Since we need more power with the serves, my star player comes in handy."

Before leaving the interview, I asked Ms. Guzik to give us some information on the mystery man. Bette replied

Volleyball Team's "Mystery Man", Augustus "Hands" Williams. [Photos by Roseann Podraza]

"He's about 5'9" weighs 150 lbs. with a right hand serve that knocks the ball clear out of the gym area."

I haven't found the "mystery man" but I understand one of the Print staff member's is a friend of his.

MS. Guzik Weds

Ms. Betty Guzik, women's varsity coach, took a big plunge forward as she decided "It was time to tie the knot."

It was love at first bite and the reason for this being Guzik married the world's famous chef Charles "Chuck" Wagon.

Who in his wedding vows promised to keep Betty up to her neck in Kielbasa (polish sausage).

When asked why the P.E. faculty members were not invited, Ms. Guzik simply replied, "I can't stand them."

Audie Matthews Signs Up At UNI

by George Tomaszewski

Audie Matthews, the 6-4 basketball star who led Bloom High School to the recent state finals, has selected Northeastern as the college of his choice. Earlier, it was reported that Matthews, the most-widely recruited player in the state, narrowed his choices to UCLA, Purdue, Oregon and UNI. Two factors played an important part in Audie's decision. First, he was eager to play under Coach Salario and secondly he said that the good bus connections made it easy to commute to UNI. Coach Salario stated that there was definitely a place on the bench for Matthews as the seventh or eighth player.

The 74-75 Golden Eagles basketball schedule was announced last week and it was learned that UNI will play UCLA on Dec. 13, 1974. The game will be played at UNI and tickets are on sale now. 15 have been sold already. Let's hope the ball bounces the Eagles' way next season.

Speaking of bouncing balls, the Intramural Streaking league has been formed but team rosters can still be brought in. For further roster information see Mr. Lester Twatter in the New Commuter Center or pick up a roster at Guido's hot dog stand on Bryn Mawr. The Tuesday and Thursday leagues are made up of the following teams so far:

- Tuesday—
- Flying Jugs, Hang 'Em Low, Bare Bottom Blues, The Moody Boobs.
- Thursday—
- Titty City, Full Moons, Buns on the Run, Smoked butt.
