Puppet Show To Be Held Here

Nicolas Coppola is the artistic director of the nationally known Nicolo Marionettes based in New York City. Their productions have been praised by educators and parents across the country. Coppola writes and directs all of their productions and is involved in the creation of the marionettes and puppets, their costumes and stage settings. Some of his plays have been adapted for human actors and presented by theater groups at the College of Santa Fe in New Mexico, Alfred University in New York and here at Northeastern.

Currently, he produces four touring shows and just finished serving as the creative consultant for the Radio City Music Hall's production of "Snow White", now running at the Arie Crown Theater.

Coppola directed and received critical acclaim in the New York press for his Off-Broadway revue, "Kumquats", a puppet show for adults. He has produced a number of shows for the Smithsonian Institute.

This workshop is Coppola's first appearance in Chicago since 1970. The registration fee is $5.00, enrollment is limited. Those interested in attending the workshop should contact Northeastern's Children's Theater at the Stage Center, ext. 535.

Peer Advisors Sought

The University Counseling Center is now accepting applications from Undergraduate students interested in serving as Peer Advisors during this summer at Freshman Orientation. Between June 19 and July 18, the peer advisors will receive one week of training and then will assist in the Orientation process during the remaining three weeks. The training period involves the development of leadership, communication, and empathic skills as well as skills in academic advising. Peer advisors will assist Counseling Center staff with the leadership of small groups of freshman students. Within the small groups, freshmen will be introduced to the academic requirements, policies, and regulations of the University. Freshmen will also be given information on classes and assisted with the formulation of a course schedule for their first trimester at Northeastern.

In the past, peer advisors have found this experience to be rewarding. If you are an undergraduate in good standing and have attended Northeastern for at least two trimesters you are eligible to apply. For further information contact David Helfand, University Counseling Center, B-115 or call ext. 362. Peer Advisors will be remunerated.

Workshop For Undecided Majors

If you are undecided on what your major should be, or have decided on a major but are not sure of that decision, then the workshop being offered this spring by the University Counseling Center may be of interest to you. The Counseling Center staff will present a workshop: Career Exploration for Undecided Majors. The workshop is scheduled for Monday and Wednesday, May 5 through June 11, from 2:00-3:30.

This six week workshop is designed to help each student discover and identify areas of strength, interest and skill as well as personal values clarification. After participants gain a perspective into their own personal data, then this information will be used together with career resource materials to help students make some meaningful decisions about what direction to pursue during their undergraduate studies.

The materials that will be used in this workshop are some of the most recent in the field of career development and testing. If you are interested in participating in this group/workshop experience contact David Helfand, University Counseling Center, B-115, or call ext. 362. Enrollment will be limited to 12-15 students.

Phon-A-Thon Looking For Volunteers

by Randolph Parks

On May 5, 1980 at 6 p.m., the Northeastern Illinois University Foundation will commence its third annual Phon-A-Thon. It will take place in the Northeastern Heritage room which is located adjacent to the cafeteria.

The Phon-A-Thon will be conducted by volunteered alumni, faculty members, and students. Their jobs will be to elicit by phone monetary contribution from Northeastern alumni. The money collected will then go towards the funding of a number of programs, which are not funded, or are under-funded, that the university needs to implement.

According to Tony Wiszowaty, the director of Development, this money goes towards such things as students' financial assistance in the forms of scholarships and loans, faculty fellowship, to purchase library books, research equipment, and other necessities.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Wiszowaty said that a minimum of one hundred and sixty-five volunteers will be needed to man the fifteen phones that will be in use during the Phon-A-Thon which will last for a total of eleven days. Volunteers may volunteer for one or more days. The days of the Phon-A-Thon are May Fifth thru Eighth, Twelfth thru Fourteenth, and Nineteenth thru the Twenty-second. The time is between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m.

WIN PRIZES

At the conclusion of the Phon-A-Thon, the people who have managed to get the most contribution will be given prizes. The grand prize is a weekend for two at the Norside Hilton in Skokie, the second prize is Sunday brunch for two at T.J. Peppercorn's restaurant, Lincolnwood Hyatt House. They have not decided on the other prizes as yet.

Those people interested in becoming volunteers may contact Tony Wiszowaty at 583-4050, ext. 273, or Dick Quagliano at the Print's office 583-4050 ext.

Former UNI Student Arrested in FALN Activities

by Dick Quagliano

The PRINT has learned that one of the 11 suspected FALN terrorists was a Northeastern student. Alfredo Mendez, who was identified by the FBI as one of those arrested in Evanston last Friday, was a UNI student from September 1976 through December 1977.

According to sources, Mendez spent a year and a half here at UNI before dropping out "to pursue other matters."

Those "other matters" apparently included involvement with the FALN, a Puerto Rican terrorist group that advocates violence in securing the independence of Puerto Rico. In the last five years, the FALN has taken responsibility for more than 100 bombings in the United States and Puerto Rico. The group recently came to the nation's attention when they claimed responsibility for the takeover of Carter-Mondale headquarters here in Chicago and New York.

Mendez was apprehended in a van in Evanston last Friday along with Carlos Torres and his wife Marie Haydee Torres, both were on the FBI's ten most wanted list. Police have yet to determine what the group was doing in Evanston.

While at Northeastern Mendez was a member of The Union for Puerto Rican Students and Que Ondee Sola. Mendez was on the staff of Sola for six months before he made his way to the top and became editor of the Puerto Rican newspaper. Mendez was also a student aide at Northeastern, receiving state funds while working at the University.

The PRINT reached Mendez's wife at her job as an admission officer at Grant Hospital. When Mrs. Mendez realized who she was speaking to she said "No comment" and hung up the phone.

Mendez is due to be arraigned Tuesday, April 15. According to the Union For Puerto Rican Students' President Nelson Santana, many UNI students will attend the hearing to show their solidarity with Mendez and the ten other suspects. "We will be protesting the courts' right to try the eleven. They are prisoners of war as determined by the United Nations," Santana charged.

The eleven suspects have refused to speak other than say that they are prisoners of war and don't want lawyers.

UNI Grad Recommended For School Board

by Dick Quagliano

Northeastern graduates Edwin Claudio has been nominated to the Chicago Board of Education. Claudio is one of 20 nominees by the Chicago Urban League to fill eleven openings in the Board.

Those openings may be filled by Mayor Jane Byrne when she returns from Israel where she is attending a mayor's conference.

Claudio, 28, graduated from Northeastern in 1973 after only three years of college. From here he attended Harvard where he received his Master's in Education.

Claudio currently is the director of the Latino Institute located on 55 East Jackson. Claudio, who has been involved with the non-profit organization since August of 1979 says that the Institute is involved in cultural awareness to parents in the Public Schools and Latino Community Organization. "We train and give technical assistance to the Latino Community. We are also involved in human relations and its affects on the Chicago Public School System."

The UNI graduate has also had experience in the Chicago Public School System. After leaving Harvard, Claudio worked for five years in the System. He was Director of School Desegregation and also Director of Bilingual Tutorial Reading Project in ten of the Chicago Public Schools.

During his five year stint with the Public School System Claudio worked with parents and children in the system. "We trained parents to better accept desegregation and tutored children in the third and fourth grades how to read," told Claudio.

Claudio was involved with the Latino community while he attended Northeastern. He was President of the Union For Puerto Rican Students in his senior year here.

Claudio said he is very interested in the position but warned of the impending politics that usually influences the mayor's decision. "To be elected to the board it is 40% talent and 60% politics," he said.

UNI's award winning Motorcycle Safety Training Class is beginning another session for info call ext. 498.

Thanks PRINT

Dear Editor,

I would like to take this opportunity to commend the efforts of the PRINT staff. Despite limited resources, your staff still provides an adequate newspaper for the Northeastern community. I hope that your present format continues in the future. Perhaps, in future editions, more students could take interest in their newspaper. It would be a great tragedy if the PRINT would cease publication. It would be a greater tragedy if the students stand by and watch it happen!

Sincerely,

Budget Cuts Will Affect Universities

RYHAAN SHAH

Campus Digest News Service

Education groups are worried about the effects that President Carter's new anti-inflation measures would have on colleges and universities.

"We are—should I say concerned? No, we're hysterical," said Jerold Roschwalb, director of governmental relations for the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Edwin Young, an economist and former president of the University of Wisconsin, told the House Committee on the Budget, "For the sake of the country, we must protect our investment in young people."

Young foresees serious national consequences if the federal commitment to science and education is reduced.

"I am convinced by reading history," he said, "that the best defense for this country is research. World War II was not won by tanks. It was won in laboratories by well-trained scientists."

According to sources, the President's Office of Management and Budget had recommended a $900-million reduction in spending for the Department of Education, $80-million for the Health Resources Administration, and about $340-million for the National Institutes of Health.

Reduction of federal spending would cut inflation only a fraction of a percentage point, argue many economists. The budget cuts, they add, would create hardships for young people, and colleges and universities which already face financial problems.

President Carter said balancing the federal budget would be psychologically beneficial for an inflation-scarred nation.

In a speech to the American Association for Higher Education, Shirley M. Hufstедler, Secretary of Education, agreed with the president's policy. She said, "These are hard times, and all of the nation's colleges and universities—both public and private—will feel the squeeze."

"We are going to have to push ourselves away from the banquet table and go on a diet. That in itself may not be a bad thing. Starvation is bad, but dieting can be very good for both the physical and mental health."

Higher-education groups were still assuming that the Administration would support education and research which may be costly, but anti-inflationary. They were worried, however, that the Administration would change its position.

In his budget speech last January, the president had supported the increase of funds for education and research since they both could help boost the nation's productivity. The economic picture has changed dramatically since.

When planning the budget for this fiscal year, the Administration had assumed that the inflation rate would be about 10.4. However, the rate is now projected to be closer to 18 percent.

The federal government has already exceeded the ceiling set by Congress for this year, by about $12-billion. As a result, both the House and Senate has delayed action on a number of spending proposals until late April or early May when the budget ceiling will be raised.

Congress may consider cutting the costs of federal student-loan programs. President Carter's proposal for reforming the guaranteed-loan and National Direct Student Loan programs would cost $200-million more at the outset than a more popular proposal by the House Subcommittee on Postsecondary Education.

The Administration's plan would, however, cost less than the House plan over the next 10 to 15 years.

The Administration's plan would change the campus-run National Direct Student Loan program into basic and supplemental programs and would phase out the Guaranteed Student Loan program. It is estimated to cost $1.9-billion in fiscal 1981.

The House bill would cost only

Search and Screen Makes Director Recommendations

by Karen Gavzer

It is expected that early in the Spring semester, the long awaited announcement of a new Director for the Division of Business and Management will be made. This announcement will be the culmination of months of hard work and thorough investigation by members of UNI's Search and Screen Committee (S & SC). It has been a monumental effort, the main burden of which has fallen on the capable shoulders of the S&SC.

The selection process itself was set into motion this past August when the University Senate announced the results of its election of S&SC representatives. The 12 member Committee was carefully put together to ensure that all University and Affirmative Action interests would be represented by its constituency.

The S&SC, in turn, was responsible for ensuring that the search for Director would be wide enough to attract the most viable candidates. To this end, the position was advertised nationwide in publications ranging from the New York Times to the Chronical of Higher Education. The ideal candidate would meet not only Affirmative Action guidelines, but would also enjoy an expertise in the business and management area. The S&SC also set salary and government level classification standards for this new position.

The Director position is a newly created one. It is an integral part of an intermediary step on the long road to the formation of a College of Business at UNI (see Dr. Renas' letter to the editor, PRINT, January 18, 1980). As such, it is unique in the annals of UNI history. Because of its uniqueness and the importance to the University, the onus was on the S&SC to select only those candidates who would be committed to the ongoing struggle to win accreditation for UNI's Business and Management program and the ultimate goal of achieving a College of Business on UNI's campus.

Given these complexities and the importance of the position involved, it is not surprising that the selection process took months longer than originally anticipated. The Committee also lost its original Chairperson during the new responsibilities with the UNI Senate. Subsequent reorganization of the Committee and the election of Dr. Zahid Shariff as new Chairperson entailed additional delays, but finally, the S&SC managed to narrow the field of applicants down to six.

The six candidates were: Dr. Donald R. Herzog, Professor and Chairperson Division of Management, Governors State University; Dr. Edwin J. Gross, Professor of Marketing, Roosevelt University; Dr. Robert B. Shelton, Assoc. Executive Director, Assembly of Behavioral & Social Sciences, Nat'l. Research Council, Nat'l. Academy of Sciences; Dr. James B. Spalding, Visiting Professor of Management & Marketing, Illinois State University; Dr. Mahmood A. Qureshi, Professor of Accounting, California State University; and UNI's own Dr. Stanley R. Renas, Professor and Chairperson, Business & Management Department.

These six finalists were inited to visit Northeastern during the last two weeks of March. It was an opportunity for the six candidates to see and be seen and for the University to get to know them better. Students, faculty and administration members were invited to attend question-answer sessions with each of the six applicants, although only the S&SC would make the final recommendations to Dean Dobbs of the College of Arts & Sciences. Only three of the six finalists would be recommended for the Director's position.

Deciding which three was a tough decision for the Committee because, in the words of Dr. Shariff, the six finalists were all "outstanding." But, according to a reliable source, the Committee finally agreed upon Drs. Spalding, Shelton and Qureshi.

The final step, the actual selection of one of these three candidates, will be made by the University Administration: Dean Dobbs will make his recommendation to Provost Cownie. And according to Cownie, "(he) will make the final decision in consultation with President Ronald Williams." It is this announcement that is expected within the next few weeks.

Special thanks to all the members of the S&SC for a job well done, for without their hard work this announcement would never be made. They are: Dr. Zahid Shariff (Chairperson), Dr. Angelina Pedrose (Associate Chairperson), Dr. Jean Gillies, Dr. William Barnes, Dr. Eliezer Geisler, Dr. James Kokoris, Gertrude Meyers, Melody Singleton, Oswald Lowery, Sophie Black and Rosemarie Hengles.

Anderson Should Go Third Party

The presidential primary election is over. All of the surprises are behind us, and the two nominees have emerged. Democratic and Republican voters have had their voice, and they have loudly and consistently sung out their respective choices. Barring any unforeseen revelations, Jimmy Carter will win the Democratic nomination and Ronald Reagan, the Republican, both of their victories resulting from bandwagon public acceptance.

The Carter bandwagon made its election debut way back in November, when Americans decided that the best way to show support for a President in a time of crisis was to re-elect him. The Reagan bandwagon, on the other hand, was a bit slower in catching on. It wasn't until late-February that voters decided, for reasons that continue to elude me, that the ex-governor deserved the GOP nomination.

Whatever the reasons, though, these two bandwagons appear to be cruising comfortably towards a November general elections. Both have been picking up speed and seem as though nobody, including the voters, can stop them.

Voters are beginning to realize, however, that they've been supporting a pair of hopelessly incompetent candidates. And as a result, many have recently become very interested in the possibility of a third-party campaign mounted by Republican John Anderson.

It seems that voters are starting to question the options open to them in an election between two morons. Despondent over the thought of having to choose between Jimmy Carter, the incumbent moron, and Ronald Reagan, the challenging moron, many are hoping for an Anderson bandwagon to come along, too.

I have just one question for all of you disillusioned bandwagoneers - where were you last month when Anderson was here in Illinois giving you the chance to help him derail the Reagan bandwagon? An Anderson victory in Illinois might have shifted some of the momentum, as well as some of the delegates, in Anderson's direction.

But now that Reagan has built up a full head of steam, - in part, courtesy of Illinois - Anderson will probably be forced to pursue the Presidency with a third-party effort.

A decision to run independently, which is apparently Anderson's only remaining choice, would be defying a history of unsuccessful third-party candidates. No such candidate has ever won a presidential election, and the last one to even come close was Teddy Roosevelt, who received 25 percent of the popular vote back in 1912.

What does an independent Anderson campaign mean to those of you who voted for one of the morons last month, but know deep in your hearts that neither Carter nor Reagan should be in the White House? It means another opportunity. It means a second chance to make the right choice and to do what's best for our country, regardless of party loyalty and regardless of the sacrifices involved in Andersonian democracy.

Many people believe, if Anderson does decide to launch an independent campaign in the general election, that he will do nothing more than draw votes from Carter and throw the election to Reagan.

But between now and November, and especially after the official nominating conventions this summer, quite a substantial more number of voters are going to discover that we have nominated a couple of potentially-mediocre leaders.

We are confident that, by November, enough Americans will come to their senses so that Anderson will be elected the next President of the United States.

And, I hope that Americans will vote for Anderson, not because he represents a refreshing alternative, nor because he deserves their votes for having made the effort. We hope instead that people will vote for John Anderson in November because he IS the best candidate; because he has served in Congress for the past two decades under five Presidents; and because he has the insight and experience necessary to lead out nation through the upcoming recession and into a new period of economic rebuilding and governmental restructuring.

College Enrollment Should Peak in 81 - Study

WASHINGTON D.C. (CPS)-The National Center for Education Statistics, in its annual survey, is predicting that college enrollment will hit an all-time high in 1981 before falling to levels that could pit four-year private colleges against two-year community colleges in a battle for older, part-time students.

The NCES expects 11.69 million college students to enroll in 1981, a record number. By 1988, however, it sees enrollment shrinking to 11.048 million.

It projects that small private colleges will lose the greatest percentage of students. Private school enrollment should fall to 2.294 million in 1988, down from 2.49 million projected for 1981, and 2.478 this year.

NCES analysts predict that the private four-year schools will have to attract more older, part-time students to compensate for their losses.

Two-year community colleges, though, have been the most successful recruiting older, part-time students. One reason, according to the study called "Projection of Education Statistics to 1988-89," is that community colleges are usually in urban areas convenient to commuter students.

Older, part-time students currently account for 40 percent of the nation's two-year college enrollments. The NCES expects two-year college enrollment to decline "only slightly" over the next eight years precisely because of the community colleges' attraction to part-timers.

If private four-year colleges can't compete effectively with two-year schools for the older, part-time students, NCES warned that "many of them could face closure."

The agency's projections for four-year public colleges and universities were less drastic. It expects total public college enrollment to fall to 8.754 million in 1988 after a 1981 peak of 9.2 million. Public colleges' larger base should allow the bigger schools to survive the coming era of limits.

Most experts expect college enrollments will decline because of the dwindling number of current school-age children. Other studies predict enrollments will start to grow again in the 1990's, when the children of the post-World War II baby boom reach college age.

Total enrollment for the 1979-80 academic year, according to NCES, is 11.508 million, up from 8.006 million in 1969-70.

Teaching Skills Underdeveloped Resources - Astin

Campus Digest News Service

The teaching skills of college faculty members has been termed one of its most underdeveloped resources. Alexander W. Astin, head of the Higher Research Institute at the University of California at Los Angeles made this statement at the annual meeting of the American Association for Higher Education.

"The blunt reality of the 1980's is that most institutions will have to make do with what they already have, whether it be physical facilities or faculty and staff," said Astin.

He said that lack of training and feedback are the reasons why the teaching potential of faculty members are not tapped.

Graduate programs offer formal training in research and scholarship, but Astin added, "When we look at teaching, however, we find a very different picture. Only in rare instances do graduate programs offer formal training in this complex art."

"Once a new doctorate recipient becomes a faculty member, he or she gets very little opportunity or encouragement to test and improve teaching skills."

Astin proposed mandatory student ratings of classroom instruction "for the instructor's eyes only." These ratings would provide faculty members with an evaluation of their teaching.

He said there should be two sets of ratings if they are to be used in determining pay raises, promotions and contract renewals. One set of ratings would be for the record and the other for the instructor only.

"When ratings of classroom instruction are made public or used in personnel decisions," Astin said, "the teacher is motivated to manipulate the ratings rather than to see them as a source of accurate feedback. Thus, their learning value for the teacher is seriously compromised."

As a further aid to instructors, he proposed that faculty colleagues make reports based on periodic visits to the classrooms.

In the A.A.H.E.'s conference's keynote address, Francis Keppel, former U.S. Commissioner of Education, proposed that the quality of colleges be measured periodically by testing their students.

This proposal raised strong objections from several speakers at the conference. President Willard L. Boyd of the University of Iowa, opposed the idea since it would tend to standardize general education.

Prudential Insurance Company of America and a member of the A.A.H.E. board of directors, said the idea of a national assessment test "calls for a monolithic reshaping of general education" which would divert attention from the more serious problems of colleges and universities.

Keppel also suggested that representatives of the general public be appointed to governing boards of accrediting agencies. This proposal was supported by Thurston E. Manning, director of the Commission on Institution of Higher Education of the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

Manning said public representatives on boards of accrediting agencies should be required rather than merely permitted. He said he expected accrediting agencies to decide within the next few years whether to make greater public disclosure of the information they gather about institutions.

Public reports on campus visits by accreditation agencies is left to the institution's discretion, said Manning. He said the reports are addressed to the agency and institutions rather than to the public. If there is to be greater disclosure, he added, the agencies should prepare separate reports specifically for the public.

Education Cuts

$1.7-billion in the first year, but the cost would increase substantially in later years, said the Congressional Budget Office. This proposal would provide loans with interest subsidies for needy students and additional interest-bearing loans for parents.

The Senate Subcommittee on Education, Arts, and Humanities released its first version of the Higher Education Amendments of 1980. The bill would reduce the spending levels for many programs; levels already approved last year by the House.

The bill, estimated to cost between $45- and $60-billion over the next five years, has been criticized by the administration but is supported by college and student groups.

Some government officials have shown disapproval for the administration's proposed cuts for education and research. A House appropriations panel did not support proposed cuts in the budget that would affect aid for health-related education.

The House Subcommittee on Science, Research, and Technology recommended that the budget for the National Science Foundation be raised.

The most important decisions will be made when the House and Senate reconsider the third budget resolution for this year, and begin negotiations for the first budget resolution for fiscal 1981.

Meanwhile, education lobbyists were taking different approaches on the budget situation.

Members of the National Education Association, which represents 1.7 million teachers, lobbied aggressively on Capitol Hill. But members of the American Council on Education, representing about 1.88 colleges and universities, have assumed a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Islamic Terrorists Attacks Possible - Texas Students

AUSTIN, TX (CPS)--Two University of Texas students have obtained a U.S. Customs Service report detailing possible Islamic terrorist attacks by foreign students within the United States. However, some foreign student advisers doubt the report's authenticity and fear it may be used to exacerbate hostility toward -- and increase the danger to -- Iranian students in the U.S.

The report was prompted by a letter, allegedly now being distributed in some eastern cities, that calls on Moslems to conduct "Islamic guerilla warfare in the United States" in the event the U.S. uses military force in Iran.

The letter, reprinted in the Customs report, warns Moslems to prepare to defend "our lively interests" and to use "rhetoric, demonstrations, coordinated policies and physical warfare if necessary."

Although the letter was circulated in the east, the report was written out of the Customs Service's Portland, Ore., office.

Special Agent Lawrence LeDage wouldn't say how the Portland office got involved in the case. Though reluctant to comment, LeDage did confirm the authenticity of the report.

Lt. Larry Soulsby of the Washington, D.C. police told the Daily Texan which first broke the story, that the letter did exist.

"Our investigative services unit and our special operations units working on the Iranian situation are aware of that report," he said, "but they will not discuss it."

"I'm sure the Secret Service wouldn't give you any information on this, and we sure son't," he added.

Rumors of conspiracies by foreign nationals in this country are nothing new, warns Bill Bray of the National Association for Foreign Student Affairs in Washington. They are more likely now because of the "group phobia" of Iranians.

"The problems with Iranian students aren't new," Bray told College Press Service. "It's just the most recent and greatest political activists have been Iranians."

He notes that there could be "political motivations" behind such a letter in an election year.

"I would really question the organization attributed to these terrorists," he added.

But federal agencies are taking the possibility of Islamic guerilla activities in the U.S. seriously. The Immigration and Naturalization Service's round-up and photographing of all Iranian students is widely suspected to be part of anti-terrorist preparations. Various international student advisers around the country have reported visits from FBI agents seeking photos of foreign students since the November seizure of the American embassy in Teheran.

Don Puffer, one of the two Texas students who uncovered the Customs report, said the letter was written in English, and had no accompanying translation.

He says analysis by a university Iranian specialist suggest the grammar and usage were not originally in English. Puffer concluded the letter could have been written in any number of Middle Eastern languages.

Puffer said the letter itself advocates a thorough, carefully-planned approach to guerilla activities. It warns that "targets must be chosen intelligently and realistically (and) weapons should be chosen in correlation with the targets/persons in mind."

LeDage says the Customs Service is "still in the process of discovering who's responsible (for the letters)."

Buttered popcorn

by Dan Pearson

Foreign films have a tendency to scare some people. They feel intimidated by having to read a sub-titled English text and still follow the images on the screen.

There is also the feeling, and too often rightly so, that they are missing out on the literal translations and the local flavoring of the language.

For those viewers who will admit these misgivings as reasons for missing out on some truly marvelous times spent at the movies, there is a foreign film opening this weekend guaranteed to overcome these complaints.

That film will be shown in its native Australian tongue at the Biograph Theatre. Students of history and geography are reasonably certain to remember that the official language of that continent and country is English.

Granted, the English spoken in MY BRILLIANT CAREER may be accented differently than what you might hear on the Clark Street bus, but, nevertheless, this is one foreign film you don't have to squint at tiny letters to fill in the details of the script.

This film is an attractively told, solidly acted story of a seventeen year old, Australian girl who lives in the desolate Outback, Circa 1895, on a farm and dreams of a more artistic lifestyle than sheep-shearing and slopping the pigs.

Though she is positive she has the talent for any number of the creative arts, she decides to concentrate her efforts in writing a novel.

Her ambitions begin to take root when she is invited to live with her more cultured and monied, grandmother on a most picturesque estate. There she is schooled in the social graces and introduced into the society of the local eligible gentry. While she finds one of her suitors to be perfectly along the lines of what she feels she is looking for, she also maintains that any sort of permanent liason, i.e. marriage, would be detrimental to her career possibilities.

This last bit of reasoning, even for the last gasps of the Victorian era, does not seem convincing. I'm fairly certain the fellow she is so attached to would have no objection to his wife trying to better herself. He seems a pretty decent sort.

Judy Davis, who plays the rambunctious seventeen year old does not believe this is a "feminist" film. "It's simply a story about choices."

That cannot be argued, however, the deck does appear to be stacked on the question of whether this film about a fiercely independant young woman has any political social content.

MY BRILLIANT CAREER was directed by a woman. It was also produced by a woman. In fact, all the major areas of making this film, with the exception of the director of photography are filled by women.

The film was based on the semi-autobiographical 1901 novel of Miles Franklin, an extraordinary woman whose own life after the age of sixteen would also make a remarkable

Miss Franklin, who never married, left Australia in 1905 to work in organizing the Women's Trade Union League in Chicago. When World War I broke out she served in the Scottish Women's Hospital Unit in the Balkans under hazardous conditions.

She wrote nine novels before she returned to her native country after eighteen years abroad. She died in Sydney at the age of seventy-five having written only three more books since her return in 1933.

Judy Davis is a total delight in her first film. Though she is hesitant to talk much about herself and her career the strength of her performance, as Sybilla, is qualifying this talented actress for consideration for film work in this country.

One possible project would ask her to play a young woman from the Midwest United States. Should that strike one as odd, just recently, Lisa Eichorn had the female lead in YANKS, where this American born actress convincingly played an English girl.

MY BRILLIANT CAREER features a terrific pillow fight, the striking landscapes of Australia, and the talents of several of its inhabitants. It's a foreign film that is not only safe to attend, it's satisfying as well.

One film that opened recently is proving itself phenomenally successful at the box office and with the audience is PENITENTIARY.

This black exploitation film contains a grim but somehow hopeful look at life behind bars. A young black hitchhiker accepts a lift from a black CB hooker who is insulted by some white trash in a diner and defends the lady's honor. He's knocked unconscious and one of the rednecks is stabbed to death by the mobile lady-of-pleasure who leaves her hero to face the consequences.

Once in the joint he learns that sodomy is the favorite social activity next to television privileges. An independant sort, he'd rather not participate in the festivities and must defend himself against unwarranted attacks until he becomes a member of the elite prison boxing team.

The team is run by the white, overweight warden who's on the look-out for pugilistic ability for his brother-in-law, a fight promoter. The warden tries to compensate for the inconvenience of incarceration by providing a woman for the winner of each major bout. Also, he lets them know a good fighter can win a parole.

Female prisoners from the penitentiary across the street are imported as cheerleaders and potential trophies. Also in the spectator sections are a vocal group of homosexual prisoners, one of whom is also the film's caterer.

For several months a lengthy trailer for this film has been haunting the downtown theatres. In it was all the essential information, as to plot, characters, and most importantly, the type of action to expect. The box office success should be no surprise for an audience had been carefully created.

PENITENTIARY, with all its violence, sex, and anger is not particularly another "get whitey" film. The warden is a rather decent sort. The prison is relatively lax and the cells appear much larger than in most of the recent prison films within memory. ESCAPE FROM ALCATRAZ, SHORT EYES, THE LONGEST YARD, or even RIOT.

The audience at the Chicago was not, however, as tolerant as writer-producer-director, James Fanaka. Open hostility does tend to detract from catching the finer points of a motion picture, even one made on a shoestring like this one.

PENITENTIARY is crudely made and even though there is a positive message, it is a film that caters to the baser instincts of it's audience. This is not a movie about prison reform. It's about knocking some other guy silly so one can spend some time in a trailer with a CB hooker.

Another exploitation film, which may or may not be playing by the time this review is printed, is THE FIFTH FLOOR.

Financed by Casablanca Records, this film brings new meaning to the phrase "disco madness." It concerns the plight of a disco-dancer who is hospitalized for supposedly attempting suicide. She is placed in the psychiatric ward for observation and wouldn't you know that on the fifth floor you don't get better, you get molested.

The head molester is played by Bo Hopkins, who's first role was a character called "Crazy Lee" in Sam Peckinpah's THE WILD BUNCH. He is cast as a male nurse who is always eager to help female patients shower. This is a case of perfect casting and in its own stupified way, THE FIFTH FLOOR, does work as a Grade Z CUCKOO'S NEST.

One of my favorite scenes is where Dianne Hull, the innocent disco-dancer, teaches the fellow inmates in her mixed ward how to get down and boogie.

One character gets so involved

Judy Davis, an Australian actress, whose movie career starts with a film called "Brilliant".

The Unknowns defeated previously unbeaten Rocky Mountain Oyster Bombers 2-1, to capture the intramural floor hockey crown.

The Unknowns struck early in the first half when Bob Gloppe put a wrist shot through the legs of goaltender Chris Poulos. The first half ended with the Unknowns in total domination and a 1-0 lead.

In the second period the Unknowns lit the lamp again, this time on a power play goal by Rene' Rodriguez. With Dave Grossmayer off for charging, the Unknowns moved the puck around. The puck was moved to the point where Rodriguez lift a shot that Poulos got a piece of.

But the puck deflected off of his leg and into the net to give the Unknowns a 2-0 lead.

The Bombers finally began to mount an offense late in the second half. They cut the lead to 2-1 when Ross Capacio knocked in a rebound off of Casey Rogowski's shot. But the goaltending of Phil Chase kept the Bombers off of the scoreboard for the remainder of the game to preserve the victory.

2. Rocky Mountain Oyster Bombers
3. Aces

House Subcommittee Defeats Bill Calling For Women Registration

Campus Digest News Service

Congress has upset President Carter's plan to resume draft registration.

The House Subcommittee on Military Personnel defeated the administration's bill requesting authority to register women. And the administration is still unsure that Congress will provide the additional funds the Selective Service needs for the registration of men.

Several Senators have questioned whether registration was necessary now. A House appropriations subcommittee has turned down the President's appropriations request, but did not kill the proposed bill altogether.

Congress was asked for an additional $20.5-million in the current fiscal year for the registration of both men and women. The House subcommittee refused to even provide the $12.3-million necessary for registering men.

The subcommittee recommended that $4.8-million be appropriated, enough to allow the Selective Service to improve its capacity to undertake registration in the future.

However, budgetary constraints has delayed any action on the bill. Congressional appropriations for this fiscal year has already exceeded, by about $12-billion, the spending ceiling Congress had set for itself.

No other spending can be approved unless Congress raises the ceiling, and a revised budget resolution is expected to be passed in late April or early May. The administration's bill will be considered then, said aides on the staff of the House Appropriations Committee.

EAGLES CONTINUE TO SKID

The Quagmire

Time To Go

After over 50 columns that spanned over three years I've finally reached the end of the road: Graduation. With that ultimate conclusion to my college career, comes the end of the Quagmire.

It began three years ago when I was a sports staff writer for this newspaper. In two short months my coverage included a weekly column.

In that time I covered baseball strikes and World Series. I sighed with the disappointments of Chicago sports teams, and cheered with an Olympic Gold medal. I watched UNI athletes come and go, along with their coaches. I wrote on all of that and a whole lot more.

In that time I have seen the beginning of evolution.

When I arrived here at Northeastern the sports program here was in its infancy. The athletic department was fighting with student government in an attempt to receive more funds for their programs. But all of that ended when the student body passed the Athletic Fee and thus a REAL athletic program was born.

With the new influx of funds, the athletic department was able to hire quality coaches. Sure they were part-timers, but they were devoted just the same. So coaches like Bergman, Bernstein, Schultz, Forman, Christopher, Schimpf, Zierk, and Faloon began to rebuild a program.

They did it without the help of the State of Illinois. You see the State feels that Athletes should practice in the parking lot rather than on athletic fields. They also hink that five sport teams should crowd each other nightly in a gym that is the size of a crackerbox. If anything will impede Northeastern's progress, this will be it.

But the coaches still plod along. Bergman continues to recruit, not knowing if he will have a field to practice on.

Zierk looks at the foldable gym mats and says thank you every time one of the gymnasts falls and is able to get up.

The real sign that Northeastern is progressing is the beginning of a decent Intramural program. This enabled more students to use the facilities here and see what the Athletic Fee is being used for.

Yes, the Athletic Department has progressed in the last three years, but it still has a long way to go. There is no better way for a school to get name recognition than if you have a successful athletic team. The athletic department needs that "big winner" to give the UNI students a little pride in themselves and their school.

So there it is, the end. Its all over. But I'll be back because I know that there are real winners here.

The GOLDEN QUALIL AWARD: I can't think of a better person to give it to than myself. After three years of giving the award I feel that I deserve it.

by Hugh Bette

The Golden Eagles opened up their 1980 conference season April 5, and "took it on the chin", losing twice to the Illinois Institute of Technology.

In the first game, the Eagles took a 1-0 lead in the first inning, when Andy Pope knocked in Tony Pietro from third. Pietro advanced from 1st to third on Randy Zagorski's double. But, this was not to be the Eagles day. IIT took the lead for good in the third inning by scoring 2 runs, and iced it in the 4th with a 6 run barrage.

The Eagles tallied once again in the 6th inning when Ralph Lippert drove in Scott Lancaster from third, and twice in the eighth as pitch runner Joe Zamora was driven in on Jesse Zaragoza's first college homerun. IIT added a run of their own in the eighth, to make the final 9-4.

In the second game, things appeared to be different. Lead-off man, Dan Patenaube started things rolling for the Eagles in the first inning by working the IIT moundsmen to a full count, before coaxing a walk. Pietro then followed with a double, and Zagorski and Pope followed with run producing singles, giving the Eagles a 2 run lead. But, once again it was not to be, as the IIT pitcher "shut the door" on the Eagles the rest of the say, allowing Northeastern only 4 more hits the rest of the game.

IIT managed 12 hits, and 10 runs to trounce the Eagles in the nightcap, 10-2. Adding to the Eagles downfall were 6 errors, and 7 base-on-balls.

The Eagles play Chicago State in a Conference doubleheader on Sunday, and are optimistic that a couple of wins will turn things around. "We've got a young and inexperienced ball club", commented tri-captain, Tony Pietro. "We're a lot better than we've looked so far. Once everyone begins to feel more relaxed and gains a little confidence, I'm sure we'll be able to play with around.

Randy Zagorski, another of the Eagles' tri-captains feels the same way. "I'm not giving up on us at all. A win here and a win there will instill the confidence we need to make us a highly competitive team."

The Eagles also play twice on Saturday against Harper College in Palatine, and twice on Wednesday the 16th, in Evanston against Northwestern. Thursday the 17th, the Eagles will then take to the air and sunny skies of Hawaii, before returning April 26th, to complete the rest of their schedule.
